

Science in Society Lecture

Professor Miriam Solomon

Temple University

“A Troubled Area’: Understanding the Controversy over Screening
Mammography for Women aged 40-49”

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 2, 2012

4:15 P.M.

ALLBRITTON 311

Miriam Solomon’s research interests are in philosophy of science, philosophy of medicine, history of science, epistemology, gender and science and biomedical ethics. She is currently writing a book on evidence-based medicine, medical consensus conferences, narrative medicine and translational medicine, titled Beyond the Art and Science of Medicine. She is the author of Social Empiricism (MIT Press, 2001), and has published extensively in epistemology, philosophy of science, philosophy of medicine and biomedical ethics.

SPONSORED BY THE SCIENCE IN SOCIETY PROGRAM

WESLEYAN.EDU/SISP